
Tünde Handó has been the President of the National Office for the Judiciary since 1st January 2012.

She obtained her degree at Eötvös Loránd University, Faculty of Law. During her university years she was member of the first lawyers' college for advanced studies, István Bibó College for Advanced Studies.

She worked as a trainee judge at the Budapest-Capital Court starting from 1986. She passed her legal bar exam in 1990, then worked as an assistant judge. She started her judicial career at the Budapest-Capital Labour Court in 1991. From 1999 until her appointment as the President of the National Office for the Judiciary, she was the president of the Budapest-Capital Labour Court. The Hungarian Parliament elected her as a member of the Hungarian Constitutional Court from 1st January 2020.

Lecturer at Eötvös Loránd University, Faculty of Law, Labour Law Department since January 1999. Member of the Legal Bar Exam Committee since 1999. She was the vice-president of the Hungarian Labour Law Association between 2000-2012 and in 2008 the president of the European Association of Labour Court Judges.

As President of the Hungarian National Office for the Judiciary, she has been committed to develop "digital courts" from the very beginning. As a result of technical innovations carried out in the field of electronic communication and digitalisation by the National Office for the Judiciary, Hungary has become one of the leading countries in court digitalisation in the European Union.